

TO THE SUPREAME
AUTHORITY of this NATION,
THE COMMONS of ENGLAND
in PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED.

The humble Petition of the Exiled Gentlemen of the Island of Jersey, in their owne name, and in the behalf of the rest of the well-affected of that Island,

HUMBLY SHEWETH,

That your Petitioners have (divers times during these five yeares and half, exiled from their Native Country,) Petitioned the Honorable House of Parliament, about some releif and reduction of their said Country, though hither to, we have obtained, neither the one nor the other, from your Honours, so that your Petitioners, continuing in their deplorable and bleeding condition, aggravated by the cries and distresses of their Vives, Children and friends; they are again imboldened, to address themselves to this Honorable House, the Supream Power of this Nation. Humbly beseeching :

That it may please your Honours, to take some effectuall course for some present releif, for your poore Petitioners subsistence, (till the reduction of their Island) being likely to perish, unlesse God be pleased to move your hearts, to afford them some present help and releif.

And your Petitioners shall pray &c.
